The Ants and the Grasshopper

Adapted from Aesop's Fables

One summer day, a grasshopper met some ants.

They were carrying food to their storerooms under the ground.

“Good day”, said the grasshopper. “It is a fine day, is it not?”

The ants did not stop to talk. They went right on working, with not a minute lost.

The grasshopper watched for a while. Then it said, “Why do you work so hard on a fine day like this? Now it is time to sit in the sun and rest.”

“No”, said the ants. “Now is the time to work. When winter comes, food will be hard to find. It is best to plan when times are good for the times that might be bad.”

The grasshopper laughed at the ants and went on its way.

Months went by. The days grew cold. The ground was covered with snow.

Under the ground, the ants were warm and happy. They had all the food they needed.

But the grasshopper, above, was thin and hungry. Shaking with cold, it thought of the busy ants. “I should not have laughed at them,” it said. “The ants were right. It is best to plan when times are good for the times that might be bad.”

It is best to prepare for the days of necessity.
